What is child endangerment?

What does the law consider child abuse or neglect? How can we protect our children in and outside the home? Can yelling at your kids in public result in a report to child protection and an investigation? What should you do if you suspect a child is being harmed?

Bring your questions to a session led by a social worker and expert in trauma-informed care at Mitchell Hamline School of Law. She will talk about how to avoid a child protection case and what to do if you have one.
